CONJECTURES RIFE ON POSSIBILITIES

POLITICS THESE DAYS MAKE STANGE BEDFELLOWS.

LEADERS STILL AT SEA

Meanwhile the Non-Partisan Movement Grows.—The People Are Thinking for Themselves.

N. B.—This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for The Gazette on the Wisconsin situation.

By Bob Acres.

"And the lion shall lay down with the lamb and a great fear came to the men in high places." This is not from the Koran or from any book I know of, but just the same expresses the sentiments of some of the political leaders who are at present worrying their heads off to a T. I tell you they are worried. If you could read the mail that is received in Madison, if you could watch John Hannan, La Follette's private political detective, his faithful man Friday, travel with him for a day and a night, you would know the truth. The journeys, listen to the low whispered conversations he has. See the smile slowly evaporate from his broad face, you will understand what I mean when I say "great fear comes to men in high places."

I traveled with John for several hours one day last week. I have known him for years. Knew him when he was a newspaper man in Milwaukee years ago before he entered politics as a business. He has played poker with him and let me tell you John was some poker player, so I know his face. He is worried now in fact he admitted it to me on the train. Told me he was out on a special scouting mission to make his report back to the "Little Boss" in Washington as to the true situation and asked me what I knew.

That was before the Janesville convention. John opined that these conventions were stultifying arrangements and would not matter much in the long run, but that before the men of Rock county stood up on our hind legs and howled your defiance to the four winds of heaven. It was no baying at the moon that. It was a gathering of men who were deadly in earnest and strange to say ninety per cent of them were farmers and former La Follette henchmen. I do not mean they are against La Follette. Do not make that mistake, but they are against high taxes.

Do you know what I think La Follette is going to do? Well, I will venture a guess. Everyone can guess these days. The correspondent for the Milwaukee Free Press, who was in La Follette's going to resign his senatorship job and come back to Wisconsin to run for governor to save his hide and his machine. It sounds like a long guess. May be it is true, but I do not think La Follette has guessed it yet. However, strange things happen. But now for my guess.

McGovern is upholding the present taxes. Say they can not be any lower. He has his faithful paid employees, the tax commissioners, out waving their arms and preaching the highway tax is the cause of all the trouble. He has been down in Rock county rising indignantly and telling what he thinks of them, and hundreds of others who are likewise trying to excuse their actions as legislators. Well, think that La Follette is coming back to the state and going to throw the whole tax question out of the window and declare that the high taxes are all due to the branch of the republican party that deserted his standard and went it for themselves.

He is going to pose as the friend of "God's patient poor." He is going to campaign the state from end to end. Speak on the platform, from the tail ends of wagons, tear his hair, denounce the taxes, choke and rip off his collar and yell louder that it is McGovern and his followers who are responsible. To elect his men and taxes will be reduced. To aid him and he will stand by the people. That he has not deserted his "dear Popul" but is back with them to fight their battles for them if well they will let him fool them once more.

Not only is La Follette going to do this but John Aylward is also going to try his hand at convincing the "dear Popul" he is their only salvation. Aylward has the federal patronage to help convince them. Aylward is going to run for senator. He denies now, I am told, that he has made any formal announcement to this effect, but just the same it must have been an earthquake in Washington that stopped him. Maybe partner Joe said something over the phone or by the telephone wire. Anyway John has backed up again.

They did have an earthquake down in Washington at that. I read the water was all blown out of the east branch of the Potomac river and that the trolley cars and electric lights had to stop for a few hours. They had the echo of that shock struck Aylward in his offices in the Pioneer block in Madison. Anyway he took water.

By the way, two years ago the opponents of Karel moved heaven and earth to defeat him. They charged him with every crime in the list they could think of from "Who hit Billy Patterson" to being a Catholic or an enemy of Catholics or something or other. Well, they are at it again. The old Catholic story is being repeated day after day in the northern part of the state where the Lutherans are and furthermore they are believing it. Funny a man's religion is used against him. If a man did not believe in anything he stands a better show than some numbskulls who can not think for themselves anyway.

Brother Hutton is sitting tight on the lid. Shaking hands with his friends, writing a few letters, keeping his ear pretty close to the ground, but does not like this taxation talk one bit. Meritt Hall is more enthusiastic. He says the attack on the university and its expenses fits in with what he has preached the last two sessions of the legislature and wonders why its detractors think now. Crownhart is waiting, merely waiting, and Brother Roethe has his cow hide boots all oiled up ready for his long tramp as soon as the weather permits. But all are watching these county conventions. Karel's war is now what way to jump. Two years ago he shouted against the income tax and lost, and now he wonders if the tax question is going to be another Waterloo or not. He has heard of McGovern, down at Clinton, would be willing to run, he knows that Billy Wolfe of La Crosse is anxious to fight it out, if he dared, and he is guessing how far Brother Schmidt is going to permit himself to be fooled into entering the race by John and Joe. But all the while all of them are watching the talk about taxes.

Hang the governorship anyway. Hang the university. If the state want redress from their present taxes the legislature is the only method they can hope to accomplish it by and they must choose their own legislators and select right men for the job.

OBITUARY

Fred C. Milligan.

Fred C. Milligan passed away February 10th, at his home of his father-in-law, Fred Parker, in Kenosha, Wisconsin. Mr. Milligan was formerly a resident of Janesville, where he began his career in the telephone business under the management of H. W. Miller.

In 1854, he took his first exchange as manager in the small city of New London. Since that time he has acted as manager at the Madison, Ashland and many other large cities. He was manager at the Kenosha exchange for a period of eight years and was one of the most valuable men ever employed by the Wisconsin Telephone company, for in and around Kenosha he developed the system enormously, making many improvements.

He left Kenosha and assumed a responsible position with the Chicago Telephone company.

The deceased was a native of Rochester, N. Y., where he was born September 16th, 1874. He came to Wisconsin with his parents when a boy.

Death was due to a complication of diseases of which he was a sufferer for many months. His lungs had troubled him, and for the past year he had been in Texas, in hopes of a cure.

Mr. Milligan was united in marriage seven years ago, to Miss Jennie Parker of Kenosha. He leaves to mourn his loss, a widow and two small sons, Lynn, aged four and a half, and a brother, William, Milligan, of Evansville, and a sister, Mrs. Forest Robinson of the town of Janesville.

Funeral services will be held at the Lake View cemetery in Kenosha.

Mrs. Mattie Atwood Eldredge.

Atwood, whose death occurred yesterday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock at the home of her son, F. R. Eldredge, 243 Vernon Ave., Beloit, was born Dec. 21, 1844, near Rockton, Illinois, and was the daughter of John and Anna Atwood, pioneer residents of northern Illinois. October 9, 1867, Mattie Atwood was united in marriage to William Eldredge and went at once to live at the old home farm on the south side of Beloit, where she lived continuously for thirty-eight years, moving to Beloit in August, 1905, where she has since made her home at 1020 Fifth street.

Mrs. Eldredge has been ill for some months, and a year and about two months ago Mr. and Mrs. Eldredge went to spend the winter with their son, F. R. Eldredge, Vernon avenue, where Mr. Eldredge passed away January 31, 1914, of heart trouble. The cause of Mrs. Eldredge's death was pneumonia. At the age of fourteen years she was united with the Baptist church at Rockton, later uniting with the Baptist church at Atton and about twenty years ago transferring her membership to the Beloit church, and always a consistent faithful member. She was the mother of seven children, two dying in infancy, and a daughter, Mrs. Alice Gesley, who passed away ten years ago.

There are left to mourn the loss of a loving and faithful mother, the son, F. R. Eldredge of Beloit, three daughters, Mrs. L. J. McCrea, town of Beloit, Mrs. M. E. Blum and Mrs. Clyde States, Hebron, Illinois, and grandchildren. She is also survived by four sisters, Mrs. Sallie Andrews, Stillman Valley, Illinois; Mrs. Anna Willard, Zions City, Mrs. Eliza Irons, Rockton, Iowa; Mrs. Jennie, Peconia, Illinois, and five brothers, Henry, Wood, Zions City, Joseph, Patton and Philip Atwood of Rockford, and John Atwood of La Mars, Iowa.

Mrs. Eldredge was one of the members present at the late funeral services held at the home Mrs. L. J. McCrea, August 20, 1913.

Funeral services will be held at the home of the son at 343 Vernon avenue, Beloit, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in the Atton cemetery. The Rev. G. E. Lockhart of Beloit, will conduct the services.

SUGAR BEETS WILL GROW ON ANY GOOD WELL DRAINED SOIL

Department of Agriculture Experts Make Tests on Proper Soil for Sugar Beet Growing.

Rock county farmers will be interested to learn that according to the department of agriculture that any good soil, if properly worked, will produce satisfactory sugar beets, provided the climatic conditions are favorable. The department has found that in soil should be able to hold a sufficient amount of moisture. Even the so-called muck soils will produce good beets if they are well drained and properly worked. These facts are emphasized in a new bulletin issued by the United States department of agriculture entitled "Sugar Beet Growing Under Various Conditions."

The new bulletin, which may be had free on application to the department, recommends the following measures to beet growers:

Select the field for sugar beets with reference to the quality of the surface and subsoil, the condition of drainage, and their fitness to follow the preceding crop.

Plow thoroughly and deeply in the fall.

Make the seed bed firm below as well as near the surface.

Plant in the spring as soon as the soil and weather conditions are right.

Use plenty of seed to insure a good stand and do not plant too deep.

Hold the moisture in contact with the seed by the use of the press wheels and the roller.

Cultivate as soon as the rows can be seen, but do not throw the dirt over the beets.

Block and thin the beets just as soon as they are large enough to handle.

Space with reference to the strength and moisture-holding capacity of the soil.

Rotate with other crops to improve the soil condition and to eliminate pests.

Keep plenty of livestock to utilize the beet tops and other feed and to supply stable manure.

In harvesting the beets see that they are all gathered, properly topped, and as free as possible from dirt. Cover the beets as soon as topped to prevent evaporation.

Utilize beet tops, pulp, and lime with a view to improving soil conditions.

For the retention of sufficient moisture for crop production the supply of nitrous plays an important part. A soil that is well drained at the same time properly supplied with humus will not only hold enough moisture for the needs of the plants, but it will permit the air to circulate through it and enable the soil organisms to thrive and multiply, thereby liberating an abundance of plant food.

The nature of the subsoil has an important bearing upon the selection of soil for growing sugar beets. Hard pan subsoils should be avoided, especially if they are so near the surface that they will interfere with the proper growth and development of the crop. Likewise, the soil should be free of gravelly subsoils will not give the best results with sugar beets. In general, if a soil has been producing corn and clover, potatoes, etc., it will produce good beets, provided it receives the proper preparation and cultivation.

In selecting a field for sugar beets it is advisable, therefore, to note the kind of soil and its condition, especially with reference to drainage and humus, the kind of the subsoil.

The field selected should be reasonably free of weeds, since extreme foulness of ground is a very serious ally to the cost of growing beets. The best field must be kept free from weeds if one expects to obtain any thing like satisfactory results. It is sometimes claimed that a beet crop is of great advantage in freeing a field from weeds. This is true if the ground is properly handled, but one should not be lulled into the false belief that the beet crop is a large percentage of the product of the crop is consumed in fighting the weeds, a condition which may be avoided by careful attention to the preceding crops with respect to weed growth.

The sugar beet is the waste lime. This has considerable value if used to correct the acid condition of the soil. It is well known that a soil should be neutral or slightly alkaline to produce the best results. Lime can combine with injurious acids that develop in soil and render them neutral. If, therefore, a soil is inclined to be acidity, an application of lime will be beneficial. Ordinarily an application of from 500 to 2,000 pounds of waste lime per acre will correct the acidity and otherwise improve the soil. Any finely divided or airskated lime will serve this purpose, but the waste lime may usually be had for the hauling. It is therefore an inexpensive remedy. Heavy soils which tend to become too compact are improved by the use of lime. The value of lime has never been fully realized, and it should come into more general use to improve soil conditions. In Europe, it has an actual money value, not only for farmers who purchase large quantities of it, but for manufacturers of commercial fertilizer who use it as a filler for their goods.

MUCH EXCITED.

Judging from the activity in its campaign of misrepresentation of facts as to the mass meeting held last Saturday to protest against the excessive high taxes, the Beloit Daily News is afraid of the uprising of the voters against the present regime. Following the lead of Assemblyman Rosa, who has become the self-appointed defender of the state tax commission,
the Daily News seeks to substantiate its position, calling the gathering a stunt, and one, mindful of the fact that the men who signed the call, the men who presided, who talked, were not stuntists nor ever have been. They base their opinion upon a personal letter sent out by Emmanuel Philipp of Milwaukee to some of his political friends asking their opinion as to the advisability of holding county conventions of conservative republicans, but after the Janesville convention had been called by men actuated by a desire of self-protection. Taxation without representation. Taxation. This is a fact beyond dispute and it looks now as though the taxpayers of Rock county have been without representation in the enactment of the state tax laws for at least one session of the legislature at least. One would expect Mr. Rosa to seek to explain his position as he does. In fact it was a standing joke in the last legislature that he talked on every question that came up, stating that each was a most important measure. Assemblyman Koessler of Jefferson even made it a point of issue at one time and called the attention of the legislature to the fact. If anyone agrees with Rosa, all right. If they do not if they object to the tyrannical methods of the administration, as did Hon. Neal Brown in his address before the County Bar association last Monday evening, it is all wrong and the Daily News makes haste to take its cue from its Mentor and burst into a bitter attack upon the individual or the movement. However the people are thinking for themselves this year and the Daily News will find its position a hard one if it seeks to uphold the high state taxes even though it is blind to the real truths.

THE GOVERNOR'S VIEWS.

Everything is high taxes just at present. The Evening Wisconsin discusses the governor on high taxes
and says:
"It is to be hoped that Governor McGovern is right in his assertion that taxes are now as high as they ever will be in Wisconsin. But the governor hardly is likely to be accepted as reliable authority when he makes a statement of this sort. The fact is the governor is at the head of an administration whose policy has raised a whirlwind of opposition and he is trying to talk the whirlwind down.

"The fact is also that the governor is a very smooth talker and a dialec-tician of the kind who could divide a hair 'twixt north and northwest side.
He showed his casuistry when at the same time he was supporting the Bull Moose party and running as the republican candidate for the govern-ship.

"Even in his address last night, in which he made his eloquent assurance that taxes never would be higher, he repeated the substance of a former speech extolling commissions, and declared that he would support more commissions if it could be shown that they would benefit the state. That is a vital point in controversy. Who that feels confident commissions benefit the state would not be for commissions? But how could there be more commissions without more taxes? The governor's henchmen do not serve in commission-ships sans remuneration. From the standpoint of people who admire commissions, the governor's commissions are lovely things, but the people have learned that they differ from orchids in requiring sustenance. They do not thrive on air. Observing citizens are very well aware that the more commissions there are the higher will be the taxes, and when the governor, while promising no advance of taxes
on the one hand, suggests the possibility of more commissions on the other, they will regard him as inconsistent and talking for effect rather than with the earnest purpose of elucidating problems of government."

CAN IT LAST?

"We are a hopeful nation, but 'can it last?' says an exchange. 'The army of the unemployed grows larger every day. The murmurs of discontent increase. Every report of the reopening of a factory is hailed with joy. Business drags in every line of industry, excepting in our legislative halls where demagogues are working over-time. The splendid optimism of the American people sustains them in this trying hour.

"The federal government has taken possession of the railroads. It fixes their tariffs, it decides what applicances they must use and what wages they must pay. State public service commissions pass upon the securities that can be issued so that the stockholders have nothing to do excepting to elect the directors and foot the losses.

"Everybody knows that the halt in the iron industry and allied branches of trade is due to the lack of orders customarily received from the railroads. The increase in the cost of labor and material coupled with the slackening in business has crippled
the railroads everywhere. Dividends are being passed or reduced, economies of the strictest kind are being enforced, yet net earnings continue to show an alarming decline. In this crisis the failure of the Interstate Commerce Commission to act is an outrage that capital and labor should resent at once.

"The railroads ought to spend, and would spend, $3,000,000 a day for new rails, cars and other equipment if they had the money. They should spend a billion dollars a year for the next five years. Three quarters of this would go to labor. Do the working men of this country realize what this would mean to them? Do shop-keepers realize it? Do our manufacturers realize it? If the Interstate Commerce Commission will not act, let us have a commission that will. The country demands it. Let President Wilson act.

"The railroads have been brought to the verge of bankruptcy. Must they repeat the painful experience of 1893, when three-fourths of them went into the hands of receivers? Worse still, the politicians and demagogues who are responsible for this crisis in the affairs of the railroads, now propose to try the same tactics on the industrial corporations.

"We repeat 'We are a hopeful nation, but can it last?'"

A DEBT YOU OWE.

Does the average citizen stop to consider what he owes his home city?
Casually speaking one would say no.
Janesville is a city of some fifteen thousand; the last census makes it less, however, inhabitants who reside here. If each one of them would make it their personal business to boost Janesville, the world at large could soon hear of it and comment on the fact. Loyalty to your employer, loyalty to your city, are two essential features of civic life. A man who is not loyal to his employer is not a good citizen. A man or woman who will not say a good word for their neighbor is not a good citizen. Talk Janesville, write of Janesville and the dreams you have of Janesville will come true. There is such a thing as wearing away prejudice by continual hammering facts, just as you can wear away the hardest stone by drops of water. The latter is the slower method, so try the former and boost Janesville. Become affiliated with the Commercial or the Twenty-five Thousand club and help boost.

THE FAIR.

Janesville is to have a fair. It is due to the efforts of the directors of the Park Association. The fair project has been discussed at various gatherings of business men for years, in fact ever since the old fair association died a natural death, but not until the men who are handling the Park Association stepped to the front and sought stock subscriptions did it take definite form. Now we are to have a fair. New buildings are to be constructed on the grounds already owned by the association, the grounds

A year ago Janesville entertained a special committee of the state legislature who sought a location for the state fair. They expressed themselves as much pleased with Janesville, with the location, with the tracks and wondered that Janesville did not have a fair of its own. Now we are going to have one. More money is needed.
The success of the committee in their initial canvass has convinced them that to make the fair a success much people are willing to contribute. Ev-

REV. HILL DENIES HE STRUCK HOGAN

Says Statement is False As to There Being Fistic Encounter in Dispute.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
New York, March 4.—The Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill today issued a denial of the statement of the Rev. J. C. Hogan of Monroe, N. Y., that he had struck the latter during an altercation after a debate on socialism in Hartford, Conn., on the night of March 2.
Dr. Hill says his altercation with Mr. Hogan arose over the possession of some papers that were lying on the table. These papers, he claims, were his personal property and Mr. Hogan attempted to leave the room with them in his possession. Dr. Hill says he then interfered and caught Mr. Hogan's coat as he was going through the door, demanding return of his papers. He says no blows were struck and no violence of any kind was offered during the dispute.

If Ellis received the death penalty at your hands," declared the prosecutor, "he will have a chance to make his peace with the almighty. He gave his wife none."

An Elegy.

The lowing herds wind slowly o'er the lea;
A load of gay joy riders pass that way,

They make his horses climb up on the bank;
They make fun of his whiskers and his team,
And give their speed control another yank.

Two Men Find the Same Remedy for Chronic Catarrh.

Mr. Delton Buck, Eyota, Minn., writes: "Finally the catarrh began to affect my eyesight and hearing and becoming alarmed I wrote to Dr. Hartman. He advised the use of Peruna and salt water eye baths, which advice I followed.
"I continued the above treatment several months until I was entirely cured, and now, after nearly three years, have had no return of the disease. I consider myself permanently cured, and cheerfully recommend Peruna to all those suffering as I did."
March, April and May are good months to effectually treat catarrh.

Mr. Samuel A. Seal, R. R. 2, Treadway, Tenn., writes: "It gives me great pleasure to testify to the great good your medicine, Peruna, has done for me in a chronic case of catarrh of the stomach.
"A friend of mine passing by handed me one of your pamphlets, and seeing how Peruna was recommended for catarrh, I sent to Rogersville, Tenn., for Peruna. After taking it a few days I began to get better. I continued using it until I was able to go to work on the farm again, and now I am in very good health and do work on my farm."

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE FEAR OF LIVING.

"WELL, of course it's splendid to have children and they must be a great comfort to you when they grow up safely and turn out well," said my childless neighbor, "and sometimes I'm sorry that I didn't have them. But since that child has been sick I've come to the conclusion that I'm mighty glad I didn't. It means altogether too much agony."

"That child" to which my childless neighbor referred, was the youngest baby of the little mother across the way. He was born suddenly and serenely in the little room, when his mother and father were ecstatically happy in preparing a wonderful Christmas tree for the little brood. And his illness plunged them from a shining height of happiness into a depth of misery that made one sick at heart to contemplate, even from the safe distance of one's own Christmas happiness.

The little mother across the way has three babies, but she once lost one, and now whenever sickness shows its ugly head in the home she is tortured by an agony of anxiety compared with which the inquisition would be a form of amusement.

My childless neighbor had just been in to see if there were anything she could do to help, when she announced the conclusion which I have recorded above; that it is better to be childless since those who do have children suffer so cruelly from the fear of losing them.

What a decision! What a terrible mistake! Not only in the matter of children, but as regards all the world while things of the world are concerned.

To be afraid of great happiness because the possibilities of unhappiness come with it; to be afraid of loving because loving and losing are twins, these are two of the commonest and saddest mistakes in the world.

Wealth, fame, love, power, success, honor, children—all the good things—bring with them the possibility and fear of loss. For every height there is a depth and the greater the height the greater the depth. And yet I think the most unfortunate cowards in the world are those who are afraid of life.

"The Fear of Living" is the title of a beautiful French story which contrasts two groups of people. In the one group were those who were afraid to live, afraid to love, afraid to risk with the attainment, the suffering with the happiness. Their lives were sheltered, but empty, mean, joyless and disappointed. In the other group were those who were not afraid of life, who lost, gained, lived, loved, rejoiced, suffered, and were satisfied.

Do not be afraid to live and you need not be afraid to die. It seems to me that the most tragic death is not that of the man who is taken away in the midst of a rich full life, but that of the man or woman who has never lived. Do not let the fear of living deprive you of your birthright—a life with all the gain and loss, happiness and sorrow, understanding and satisfaction that that means.

IF YOU would cultivate a good disposition, select a good day each day and resolve to let nothing ruffle you. The first week may record many failures, but keep at it and you will win.

TIMELY TIPS.

Dried orange peel, allowed to smolder on a hot iron griddle will kill any bad odor in a room, and will leave a fragrance behind.

The Paris Art Institute offered a $10,000 prize for a preparation which would clean delicate fabrics and not fade or injure the colors. The following simple remedy won the prize: Grate raw potatoes to a pulp, add a pint of water to a pint of pulp. Pass this liquid through a sieve, then allow it to settle. Pour off the clear liquid, which will be used for cleaning. Dip a sponge in the liquid and apply it to the fabric until the spots are removed. Rinse in tepid water and press with a warm iron on the wrong side.

For white silks add a little borax to the liquid. A drink of water as hot as it can be taken, if carefully followed each night, will cure even obstinate cases of insomnia.

Gasoline or alcohol are wonderful helps in keeping the frost from window panes. Care must be taken to keep the gasoline away from the fire.

If a thin piece of cheesecloth is fastened over the cold air duct it will keep out much dust and dirt.

When a tape gets away in the casing run in a crochet hook and pull it through.

Chocolate is improved by the addition of a few drops of vanilla in the pot just before serving.

Wash all eggs before using and save the egg shells for cleaning coffee.

Waffles are much better made with sour milk and cream and the batter quite thin.

Bread pudding flavored with chocolate, adding it to the custard, makes a delicious change.

A strip of flannel folded and dipped in very hot water and wrung out, then applied to the neck of a child with croup, will bring quick relief. For all severe pains it is a simple and effective remedy.

THIS WOMAN WANTS SEAT IN CONGRESS

Located not a hundred miles from here is a factory that often finds, on Saturday night, that there is work to be done that must be finished up before the beginning of another work week. This means Sunday work. Employing another man would not eliminate Sunday work, so the men are called in turn to do the few hours' work that must be done.

The foreman has justly planned so that no one man will be called every Sunday, each in his turn responds. The hour they shall report is left to themselves in deference to the men who are steady churchgoers, with the stipulation that the work shall be finished in the forenoon. As this can easily be accomplished you can see that no hardship is involved.

All this explaining so as to be fair to both sides. To the man who runs the factory as well as the man who works for him. It sometimes happens that the owner is not given a square deal from his help; sometimes the men who work for him are not. These difficulties generally adjust themselves gradually by a change of help and employment.

Back to our factory! "Bill," said the young foreman to one of a group of men who were talking together in the few minutes that would elapse before the whistle would sound for the start of the work Sunday morning; come at the hour that suits you best, so long as you show up; but come."

We have many young men like Bill. He thought he ought to be foreman never by action demonstrated that he had the ability to do any special thing well. He thought having to work for a living a genuine hardship. Oh, we have many like Bill. He had refused to do Sunday work. In a spectacular manner he scored the management of any place that made such things necessary. He was great for playing to the galleries and the men were not to be blamed for his actions. The opportunity was too good to miss.

The foreman quietly told him that the rules of the factory would not be set aside for him, that their system was one of the important parts of the successful running of the place. If he had a fair reason for not reporting he would be given a hearing; if not he must do his share or take the consequences.

Bill was as good as his word. He is now looking for another job. When he returned to work Monday morning he was told that as the factory played no favorites he would have to go.

By "playing to the galleries" we are aware of the fact that the men were not to be blamed for his actions. The few moments' adulation one may receive is never a permanent good. It always pays to be a bit far sighted. Bill will ruefully agree to this.

My cousin Artie stayed at our house awhile last night, sleeping with me, and after we had laid there awhile talking about horrid things and who would be down our base-ball team next season, and different things we went to sleep, and pretty soon I woke up with a terrible feeling in my leg, feeling as if there was going to be a cramp in it. I kicked out hard as I could, kicking something a fearful kick, noting it wasn't any part of the bed awn account of it being softer and not hurting my foot.

Hay, out that out, yelled Artie, wats the matter with you, I was asleep then, wats the matter with you, G wizz.

Did I kick you, I sed.

Yes you did, and you dont need to pertend you didnt, sed Artie, I was asleep then.

Women Worth While

Genevieve Clark.

By Selene Armstrong Harmon. Those who know Genevieve Clark best always marvel at one thing—her level headedness. She has kept her poise in an environment and under certain conditions which would have turned the heads of many a gray-haired man and woman.

During the present season Miss Clark is enjoying with great zest all the things so dear to the heart of a girl. She made her debut officially on New Year's day at the home which her father and mother have leased for the year. No formal cards of invitation were issued, but when the day came the world and his wife went to pay tribute to the speaker's daughter. Diplomats, men and women high in official life, members of resident society and a great many men and women neither fashionable nor well known, but none the less welcome, passed in review before a line of happy girls, friends of Miss Clark's who assisted her, her mother and her mother-in-law.

Since then the speaker's daughter has been in the whirl of gaiety, which constitutes every successful debutante's first season.

Miss Clark has, however, found time for certain serious duties, and has gone about them with energy and enthusiasm. She was recently made a trustee of Neighborhood House, one of the largest settlements in Washington. Finding that money was badly needed with which to carry on a certain important branch of work at Neighborhood House, Miss Clark promptly organized a Junior auxiliary, made up of fine earnest girls. Agnes Hart Wilson, the daughter of the Secretary of Labor and Mrs. Wilson, accepted the position of treasurer of the auxiliary, and Marie Peary, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Peary, is chairman of the board of membership. These girls and their co-workers set to work in a way that soon assured the success of the venture on which they had set their hearts—the continuance of the kindergarten work at Neighborhood House.

This winter, too, Miss Clark has been studying home economics with zest. Assuming charge of house-keeping matters in order to relieve her mother for a time, the speaker's daughter set about mastering this self-appointed task with characteristic thoroughness. She had attended a course of lectures on the scientific side of the housewife's business, making a special study of food values, chemistry and business methods of buying and keeping accounts. The note book she has kept is full of practical and valuable suggestions as to menus, price lists and food values.

The average American girl could learn a valuable lesson from Genevieve Clark—a lesson in character, simplicity and common sense.

EVERYDAY TALKS FOR EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

Located not a hundred miles from here is a factory that often finds, on Saturday night, that there is work to be done that must be finished up before the beginning of another work week. This means Sunday work. Employing another man would not eliminate Sunday work, so the men are called in turn to do the few hours' work that must be done.

The foreman has justly planned so that no one man will be called every Sunday, each in his turn responds. The hour they shall report is left to themselves in deference to the men who are steady churchgoers, with the stipulation that the work shall be finished in the forenoon. As this can easily be accomplished you can see that no hardship is involved.

All this explaining so as to be fair to both sides. To the man who runs the factory as well as the man who works for him. It sometimes happens that the owner is not given a square deal from his help; sometimes the men who work for him are not. These difficulties generally adjust themselves gradually by a change of help and employment.

Back to our factory! "Bill," said the young foreman to one of a group of men who were talking together in the few minutes that would elapse before the whistle would sound for the start of the work Sunday morning; come at the hour that suits you best, so long as you show up; but come."

We have many young men like Bill. He thought he ought to be foreman never by action demonstrated that he had the ability to do any special thing well. He thought having to work for a living a genuine hardship. Oh, we have many like Bill. He had refused to do Sunday work. In a spectacular manner he scored the management of any place that made such things necessary. He was great for playing to the galleries and the men were not to be blamed for his actions. The opportunity was too good to miss.

The foreman quietly told him that the rules of the factory would not be set aside for him, that their system was one of the important parts of the successful running of the place. If he had a fair reason for not reporting he would be given a hearing; if not he must do his share or take the consequences.

Bill was as good as his word. He is now looking for another job. When he returned to work Monday morning he was told that as the factory played no favorites he would have to go.

By "playing to the galleries" we are aware of the fact that the men were not to be blamed for his actions. The few moments' adulation one may receive is never a permanent good. It always pays to be a bit far sighted. Bill will ruefully agree to this.

Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I want you to please tell me how I can have pretty hair and lots of it. Tell me what to use to make it look alive and make it grow.

My little amount of hair is not at all that is troubling me. It is my face. Oh, I am so horrid ugly, with all these pimples and blackheads. Please tell me how to get rid of them, what I must eat and what I must not eat.

If you will write me a letter very soon telling me all I ask I will never get through thanking you.

ANXIOUS.

You cannot have pretty hair and a pretty complexion in a hurry. My dear Nature must have time to do her work and the only sure way to be good looking is to have Nature help you.

In the first place, get your stomach in good condition. Eat only food that agrees with you and not too much of that. Eat all the good things, rich gravies, rich cakes, candy, fat meats, spicy sauces, pickles, etc. Eat fresh fruits and vegetables, lean meats, bread that is toasted or rather dry—never any hot or very fresh breads. Drink plenty of milk, if it agrees with you, and pure water—three pints of water a day. Take as little tea and coffee as possible—I would recommend only one cup of coffee a day, at breakfast.

Get your bowels open. Take Epsom salts often enough to keep them moving regularly.

Take a hot bath once a week and a mild sponge bath every day.

Walk at least a mile every day; five miles would be better, and breathe deep.

All this will help to clear your skin and put life into your hair.

Now get some imported Castile soap. Wash with warm water and soap every morning, rinsing well with cold water. Rub a tiny bit of cold cream into the skin and dust it lightly.

of butter. Work the lard into the flour, first using a knife then the tips of the fingers. Moisten the dough with cold water, pat and roll out. Dot the paste with small pieces of butter, using one-third the quantity. Dredge with flour, fold from edge toward center, then double the layers. Pat and roll out. Repeat until the butter is used. Roll shape, chill and bake in a hot oven.

WOULD RE-ORGANIZE CITIES AS STATES

Plan Would Give Large Cities of United States Same Jurisdiction As States.

In a recent issue of the American City magazine, there is an interesting proposition set forth by E. J. Batten. He proposes to reincorporate the larger cities of the United States as separate states, each to be represented in the United States senate by two senators, and to have the power to govern its own affairs. This idea would include New York, Chicago, San Philadelphia, other cities to be reorganized in this way when they attained a sufficiently large population to justify the change.

According to article IV, section III of the constitution, "New states may be admitted by congress into this Union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor any state be formed at the junction of two or more states, or part of states without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned as well as of congress."

The contention of Mr. Batten is that in allowing a great part of the control over large cities to rest in the hands of a state legislature, a great injustice is done those cities. Furthermore when it is considered that if the change were made the state of the City of New York would be the second largest in the Union, exceeded only by Pennsylvania. Cook County would make a greater state in population than the combined states of Montana, Vermont, Utah, New Mexico, Idaho, Delaware, Arizona, Wyoming, and Nevada. While these nine states are represented by eighteen senators in congress, Cook county is represented by a share in two.

It is further pointed out that all of the great cities of the past were independent that were many miles away. Tyre, Carthage, Athens, Florence, Venice, Genoa, were all independent when they were in the height of their glory.

This would also relieve the smaller communities of the possibility of being dominated by the larger cities of the state. Little as a farmer may know of the regulation of large cities, a city man may know less of the regulation of the rural community, and when the control of both rests in the hands of a single legislature give and take principle.

The idea is worthy of lots of consideration, in that it is closely allied with the great American idea of representation being in proportion to population.

San Francisco, March 5.—San Francisco will be inundated in 1915 with a tidal wave, white-capped and wide reaching. Retreat to the hills, however, will not be necessary for the tens of millions of people who live in the city.

Plans were completed today for conventions of four great international organizations of nurses which will be held here simultaneously. The sessions will be the annual meetings of the international organizations.

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, times out of times, due to acidity, therefore stomachs suffering with acidity, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most of the foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to accede to their diet all day, I would suggest that you should try a meal of acid food or foods which you may like in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of acidulated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present in the usual fooding of unacidified food, and thus prevent the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Acidulated magnesia is doubtless the most food corrective and stomachic known. It has no direct action on the stomach, but by neutralizing the acid of the food, and thus removing the source of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug. As a medicine, as a physician, I believe in the use of acid medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of doing so in the case of indigestion. For the cause of all the trouble, get a little acidulated magnesia in your drug store, take what you want of your next meal as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

His eyes narrowed. A gray shadow crept over his face.

"There can be only one obstacle so serious as all that," he said slowly. "You—you are already married."

"No!" she cried, lifting her pathetic eyes to his. "It isn't that. Oh, please be good to me! Don't ask me to say anything more. Don't make it hard for me, Brandon. I love you—I love you. To be your wife would be the most glorious—No, no! I must not even think of it. I must put it out of my mind. There is a barrier, dearest. We cannot surmount it. Don't ask me to tell you, for I cannot. I—I am so happy in knowing that you love me, and that you still love me after I have told you how mean and shameless I was in deceiving you."

He drew her close and kissed her full on the trembling lips. She gasped and closed her eyes, lying like one in a swoon. Soft, moaning sounds came from her lips. He could not help feeling a vast pity for her, she was so gentle, so miserably hurt by something he could not understand, but knew to be monumental in its power to oppress.

"Listen, dearest," he said, after a long silence; "I understand this much, at least; you can't talk about it now. Whatever it is, it hurts, and God knows I don't want to make it worse for you in this hour when I am so selfishly happy. Time will show us the way. It can't be insurmountable. Love always triumphs. I only ask you to repeat those three little words, and I will be content. Say them."

"I love you," she murmured.

"There! You are mine! Three little words bind you to me forever. I will wait until the barrier is down. Then I will take you."

"The barrier grows stronger every day," she said, staring out beyond the tree-tops at the scudding clouds. "It never can be removed."

"Some day you will tell me—every thing?"

She hesitated long. "Yes, before God, Brandon, I will tell you. Not now, but—some day. Then you will see why—why I cannot." She could not complete the sentence.

"I don't believe there is anything you can tell me that will alter my feelings toward you," he said firmly. "The barrier may be insurmountable, but my love is everlasting."

"I can only thank you, dear, and—love you with all my wretched heart."

"You are not pledged to some one else?"

"No."

"That's all I want to know," he said, with a deep breath. "I thought it might be—Leslie."

"No, not!" she cried out, and he caught a note of horror in her voice.

"Does he know this—this thing you can't tell me?" he demanded, a harsh note of jealousy in his voice.

She looked at him, hurt by his tone. "Sara knows," she said. "There is no one else. But you are not to question her. I demand it of you."

"I will wait for you to tell me," he said gently.

CHAPTER XII.

Sara Wendall Finds the Truth. Sara had kept the three Wendalls over for luncheon.

"My dear," said Mrs. Redmond Wendall, as she stood before Hetty's portrait at the end of the long living-room, "I must say that lovely little succeeded in catching that lovely little something that makes her so—what shall I say?—so mysterious? Is that what I want? The word is as elusive as the expression."

"Subtle is the word you want, mother," said Vivian, standing beside Leslie, tall, slim and aristocratic, her hands behind her back, her manner one of absolute indifference. Vivian was more than handsome; she was striking.

"There isn't anything subtle about Hetty," said Sara, with a laugh. "She's quite ingenuous."

Leslie was pulling at his mustache, and frowning slightly. The sunburn on his nose and forehead had begun to peel off in chappy little flakes.

"Ripping likeness, though," was his comment.

"Oh, perfect," said his mother. "Really wonderful. It will make Brandon famous."

"She's so healthy-looking," said Vivian.

"English," remarked Leslie, as if that covered everything.

"Nonsense," cried the elder Mrs. Wendall, lifting her longnettle again. "Pure, honest, unadorned blood, that's what it is. There is birth in that girl's face."

"You're always talking about birth, mother," said her son sourly, as he turned away.

"It's a good thing to have," said his mother with conviction.

"It's an easy thing to get in America," said he, pulling out his cigarette case.

It was then that Sara prevailed upon them to stop for luncheon. "Hetty always takes these long walks in the morning, and she will be disappointed if she finds you haven't waited."

"Oh, for that," began Leslie and stopped, but he could not have been more lucid if he had uttered the sentence in full.

"Why didn't you pick her up and bring her home with you?" asked Sara, as they moved off in the direction of the porch.

"She seemed to be taking Brandy out for his morning exercise," said he surlily. "Far be it from me to—Umph!"

Sara repressed the start of surprise. She thought Hetty was alone.

"She will bring him in for luncheon, I suppose," she said carelessly, although there was a slight contraction of the eyelids. "He is a privileged character."

It was long past the luncheon hour when Hetty came in, flushed and warm. She was alone, and she had been walking rapidly.

"Oh, I'm sorry to be so late," she apologized, darting a look of anxiety at Sara. "We grew careless with time. Am I shockingly late?"

She was shaking hands with Mrs. Redmond Wendall as she spoke. Leslie and Vivian stood by, rigidly awaiting their turn. Neither appeared to be especially cordial.

"What is the passing of an hour, my dear," said the old lady, "to one who is young and can spare it?"

"I did not expect you—I mean to say, nothing was said about luncheon, was there, Sara?" She was in a pretty state of confusion.

"No," said Leslie, breaking in: "we butted in, that's all. How are you?" He clasped her hand and bent over it. She was regarding him with slightly dilated eyes. He misinterpreted the steady scrutiny. "Oh, it will all peel off in a day or two," he explained, going a shade redder.

"When did you return?" she asked.

"I thought tomorrow was."

"Leslie never has any tomorrows," Miss Castleton explained Vivian. "He always does tomorrow's work today. That's why he never has any troubles ahead of him."

"What rot!" exclaimed Leslie.

"Where is Mr. Booth?" inquired Sara. "Wouldn't he come in, Hetty?"

"I—I didn't think to ask him to stop for luncheon," she replied, and then hurried off to her room to make herself presentable.

Hetty was in a state of nervous excitement during the luncheon. The encounter with Booth had not resulted at all as she had fancied it would. She had betrayed herself in a most disconcerting manner, and now was more deeply involved than ever before. She had been determined at the outset, she had failed, and now he had a claim—an incontestable claim against her. She found it difficult to meet Sara's steady, questioning gaze. She wanted to be alone.

After luncheon, Leslie drew Sara aside.

"I must say she doesn't seem especially overjoyed to see me," he growled. "She's as cool as ice."

"To something else, you know."

"Confound it all, I don't want to be pitted!"

"Then I'd advise you to defer your 'try' at it," she remarked.

"I'm mad about her, Sara. I can't sleep, I can't think, I can't—yes, I can eat, but it doesn't taste right to me. I've just got to have it settled. Why, people are beginning to notice the change in me. They say all sorts of things. About my liver, and all that sort of thing. I'm going to settle it tonight. It's been nearly three weeks now. She's surely had time to think it over; how much better everything will be for her, and all that. She's no fool, Sara. And do you know what Vivian's doing this very instant over there in the corner? She's inviting her to spend a fortnight over at our place. If she comes—well, that means the engagement will be announced at once."

Sara did not marvel at his assurance in the face of what had gone before. She knew him too well. In spite of the original rebuff, he was thoroughly satisfied in his own mind that Hetty Castleton would not be such a fool as to refuse him the second time.

"It's barely possible, Leslie," she said, "that she may consider Brandon Booth quite as good a catch as you, and indefinitely better looking at the present moment."

"It's this beastly sunburn," he lamented, rubbing his nose gently, thinking first of his person. An instant later he was thinking of the other half of the declaration. "That's just what I've been afraid of," he said. "I told you what would happen if that portrait nonsense went on forever. It's your fault, Sara."

"But I have reason to believe she will not accept him, if it goes so far as that. You are quite safe in that direction."

"Gad, I'd hate to risk it," he muttered. "I have a feeling she's in love with him."

Vivian approached. "Sara, you must let me have Miss Castleton for the first two weeks in July," she said serenely.

"I can't do it, Vivian," said the other promptly. "I can't bear the thought of being alone in this big old barn."

"Perfectly," said her sister-in-law, smiling.

"But I've been counting on—Hetty," "I say, Sara," broke in Leslie, "you could go up to Bar Harbor with the Williamsons at that time. Tell her about the invitation, Vivie."

"It isn't necessary," said Sara coldly. "I scarcely know the Williamsons."

She hesitated an instant and then went on with sardonic dismay: "They're in trade, you know."

"That's nothing against 'em," protested he. "Awfully jolly people—really ripping. Ain't they, Viv?"

"I don't know them well enough to say," said Vivian, turning away. "I only know we're all snobs of the worst sort."

"Just a minute, Viv," he called out. "What does Miss Castleton say about coming?" It was an eager question. Much depended on the reply.

"I haven't asked her," said his sister succinctly. "How could I, without first consulting Sara?"

"Certainly not."

After the Wendalls had departed, Sara took Hetty off to her room. The girl knew what was coming.

"Hetty," said the older woman, facing her after she had closed the door of her boudoir, "what is going on between you and Brandon Booth? I must have the truth. Are you doing anything foolish?"

"Foolish? Heaven help me, no! It—it is a tragedy," cried Hetty, meeting her gaze with one of utter despair.

"What has happened? Tell me!"

"What am I to do, Sara darling? He—he has told me that he—he—"

"Loves you?"

"Yes."

"And you have told him that his love is returned?"
